

BRISTOL JUSTICE OF PEACE CONFIDENT "MISS BRISTOL" WILL GREATLY ENJOY HER VISIT TO PARK; TELLS OF BEARS

James Guy Cherishes Among Fondest Memories His Stay at Yellowstone—Tells of Feeding of Bears Each Evening,
With Grizzlies Being "Boss of the Situation"

James Guy, justice of the peace, is an enthusiastic "rooter" for Yellowstone National Park, and cherishes among him fondest memories a sojourn on that vast reservation a few years ago.

In reminiscing today, Mr. Guy enthused over the manner in which the visitors are given an opportunity to witness bears of all types feeding in their natural habitat, yet at a safe distance, with a forest ranger giving most interesting information on the habits of the bears. "I know the fortunate young woman who takes this trip will have a royal time," said the local justice.

Mr. Guy thoroughly enjoyed watching the black, brown and grizzly bears feed at the "feeding grounds" near the hotels in the early evenings, and as he explained it "The grizzlies are boss of the situation."

From miles around, from their favorite haunts in the mountains and woodlands, come the bears at the regular time for feeding, knowing full well that the food is placed in certain clearings at that time of day. The mother bears come with their cubs, and sometimes will send the little ones up a nearby tree while the mother-bear proceeds to "get hers" along with the others.

But when the grizzlies put in an appearance, states Mr. Guy, the black and brown bears leave the immediate location of the food, and stay at a safe distance until the grizzlies have had what they desire. Then the others will return from the edge of the woods and eat what is left.

"The information given by the ranger on horseback as he faces the crowd of hundreds of people each evening is so interesting," added Mr. Guy. "And nearby, facing the bear-pit, is a marksman with a fully loaded gun, to protect the crowd should the occasion arise." The bears, however, it is explained by the ranger, are very near-sighted, and cannot see the crowd, and no trouble is experienced unless there is undue noise or excitement.

Morrisville Woman To Be Buried On Thursday

MORRISVILLE, July 17.—Mrs. Anna Buckley, wife of the late Stephen Buckley, who died here following a long illness, will be buried in this borough tomorrow. The funeral service will be held at one p. m. from her late home, with service at the Home Avenue Reformed Church, Trenton, N. J., at two o'clock, with the Rev. Zoltan Beky officiating.

The deceased, who had resided in West Morrisville for 35 years, is survived by her daughter, Mrs. George Walsh; four sons, Andrew, Stephen, David and George Buckley.

DOYLESTOWN TO APPLY FOR SEWER EXTENSION

Application To Be Made For Work With Federal Loan
and Grant Funds

ERECT NEW ST. SIGNS

DOYLESTOWN, July 17.—Believing that the extension of the sewer system in Doylestown is the most important piece of work that could be done with Federal Loan and Grant funds, Borough Council has authorized that an application be made to the Harrisburg headquarters for blanks to be filled out for a formal application.

By the next meeting, the sewer committee and other members of Council will have something concrete to present so that final action can be taken.

It will be the purpose of Council, if the entire town is sewered, that every property owner will be compelled to connect with the sewer.

A. Russell Thomas, secretary of the Doylestown Board of Health, briefly outlined a plan that the new county medical director, Dr. Claude L. Taylor, of Doylestown, has to rid Doylestown of every outside toilet and cesspool. It is planned to have a survey made in Doylestown first and to carry out Dr. Taylor's idea in the County Seat and then to follow it up in other Bucks county boroughs.

Borough Council members expressed the opinion that the idea was very good and intimated that the co-operation from that body would be assured. They expressed the opinion that the plan of the county medical director falls directly in line with the contemplated project of the extension of Doylestown's sewer system.

The Borough now has an ordinance which makes it necessary for property owners to connect with the sewer where possible, but members admitted that the ordinance in the past has not been enforced.

It is possible that a special meeting of Council may be called within the next two weeks to take action on the proposed extension of the sewer system.

"Even if this does cost the Borough $6,000 or $7,000 it will mean the protection of health of the people of our community to a greater degree and eventually will mean that the borough will get more income," declared Council President A. Harry Clayton.

The report of Borough Treasurer Horace M. Mann was read by Councilman B. Franklin Horner. The balance on hand in the treasury at the present time is $4,212.62. The expenditures for the past month amounted to $6,914.21 which included the following items: Borough account, $2,711.79; water account, $509.30; sewer account, $201.33; bills paid by treasurer, orders not drawn, $3,491.79.

Included among the receipts were the following items: Police fines, $50; delinquent borough tax, 1934, $16; vendor's license, $10; borough tax, 1935, $6,750.01; water rent, $292.47; delinquent water rent, $71.54; sewer rents, $957.75; delinquent sewer rent, $20.

Bonds outstanding amount to $134,000 and notes in bank amount to $10,500, some of which will be paid off during the next month.

Councilman Bartram Moore read the report of the police committee for Chief of Police James Welsh, which

PREDICTS CASUALTY LIST OF 27 CIVILIANS PER MINUTE IN EVENT OF ANOTHER BIG WAR; HALF A MILLION COULD BE DESTROYED WITHIN A WEEK

Well-Known Writer States That First Targets Would Be Women, Children and Men Concentrated in Great Cities,
Should Such Catastrophe Come in the World

(Note: A casualty list of 27 civilians per minute is predicted as a possibility in the next war by H. R. Knickerbocker, noted foreign correspondent of International News Service, in his new series, "The Great Chaos," the second article of which follows.)

By H. R. Knickerbocker

LONDON, July 17.—(INS)—Eighty thousand dead, maimed, wounded, gassed, civilians may be the casualty list in the first forty-eight hours of fighting in the next war. Within a week it is conceivable that half a million inhabitants of London, Paris, Berlin, Warsaw, Prague, and the northern Italian cities could be destroyed with the weapons now built and building.

This is regarded as a low estimate by some authorities, but the more conservative British official opinion inclines to believe that "only" 60,000 Londoners would be killed in the first week.

First targets in the next war will be the women, children and men concentrated in the great cities. Primary object of attack will be the capitals. Twenty million persons are crowded into the capitals of England, France, Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland, front line nations in troubled Europe.

But available for attack are 149 European cities with a population of more than 100,000 each. Total residents in these centers number 64,000,000.

Great Britain is geographically the most vulnerable. She has 21,000,000 inhabitants concentrated in 57 cities. Her capital, London, is the finest target of all.

Greater London has 8,000,000 people scattered over 700 square miles, but 4,500,000 of them are jammed into the 100 square miles in the center of the city. They are one hour and 13 minutes flying time from the German border. A German passenger airplane has just done the London-Berlin flight in three hours 12 minutes, at an average speed of 200 miles an hour. The new German bombers are faster.

Germany as a whole is next most vulnerable, because so many of her great industrial cities lie close to the French or Czech borders. She has 17,000,000 living in 53 cities. Her capital, Berlin, houses 5,000,000 in a space of 348 square miles. It lies thirty minutes flying time from the border of Czechoslovakia, one hour and 27 minutes from the French border, and two hours and 30 minutes from the nearest point in England.

France has only 9,000,000 living in 17 cities, but her capital, Paris, concentrates 5,000,000 people 50 minutes flying time from Germany.

German planes could reach Prague in 13 minutes. Czechoslovakia planes or Russian planes operating out of Czechoslovakia could reach Dresden in 18 minutes. It would take the Soviet planes, avoiding Poland and flying via Rumania and Czechoslovakia, in accord with the recently concluded and pending military pacts, about two hours to reach Prague as a take off to Germany.

GEORGE SCHOOL FACULTY MEMBERS TAKE JOURNEYS

Two Do Extensive Work In South America; Several
Go to England

11 REMAIN ON DUTY

NEWTOWN, July 17.—Lengthy periods are being spent abroad this Summer by several members of the faculty of George School.

South America has attracted Dean E. Constance Allen and Miss M. Louise Baker, teacher of drawing, the latter having done extensive work in Mayan art, and planning to continue such this Summer.

Taking ships bound for England are the following: Jo Wilder Abraham, librarian; Herbert J. Abraham, teacher of history; Arthur H. Brinton, teacher of English; E. Felicia Anderson, dietitian, and Janita D. Haymond, the housekeeper.

Mary B. Kirk, teacher of Latin, is traveling through western Pennsylvania and New England; Miss Anne Russell, French teacher, and Miss Anne E. Dashiell, teacher of home economics, are visiting at their homes in Maryland, while Julian J. McCreery, director of music, is visiting at his home in Sparta, N. C. Robert G. Brown, teacher of manual training, will spend the vacation at his Summer home in Maine.

Wilhelm Hubben, director of religious interests, and Elizabeth Helbel, teacher of French, are working for degrees at the University of Pennsylvania, and James A. Michener, history teacher, is studying at the University of Virginia.

Richard H. McFeely, teacher of history, is acting as director of the Junior Friends' Service Camp in Westmoreland county. Miss Grace E. Thwing, head of girls' athletics, is managing her camp, "Thwingness," in the Poconos. Stanley B. Sutton is officiating at Camp Whallawhatoola, Millboro Spring, Va.

William Vitarello, teacher of manual training and drawing, is on a tour with the marionette performance of the Pegasus Puppeteers.

Those who will remain on duty at George School during the Summer are George A. Walton, William Eves, 3d, Francis C. Pyle, Joseph B. Shane, Eleanor M. Peters, Frances W. Saurman, Stevenson W. Fletcher, Jr., Rees J. Fresolin, Jr., Anne R. Bowly, Mary G. Wilson and Grace L. Brokaw.

Two Events Planned This Week By Epworth Leagues

The special events which are to occur on Friday evening at the bi-monthly rally of Bristol Group of Epworth Leagues are stunts by various leagues in the organization. The banner award for this rally which will be held in Bensalem M. E. Church social hall, will be to the League staging the best stunt.

The Bristol Group is also planning for a picnic to occur on Saturday, July 20th at Neeley's Mill, Washington Crossing. This outing will start at 3 p. m., and end in the late evening with a camp-fire service. A picnic supper will feature.

Stands "Pat" On Neutrality

Rome, Italy, June 17.—Disclosing a strange division of opinion in Japanese officialdom concerning Tokyo's role in the event of an Italian-Abyssinian war, Japanese Ambassador Sugimura today stood "pat" on his pledge of neutrality given Premier Mussolini last night. He ignored the statement from his foreign office which declared it "unimaginable" that any such promise was given, and formally substantiated the Italian government's communication which disclosed the pledge. The Japanese foreign office branded this as a "colored diversion" of Sugimura's remarks and Tokyo newspapers bluntly accused Mussolini of "trick" diplomacy. "The Italian official statements regarding my conversation with Il Duce is exact," the Ambassador stated.

To Discuss Rate Reduction

Harrisburg, July 17.—Officials of the Pennsylvania Power & Light Company which operates in 28 central Pennsylvania counties, will soon be summoned into informal conference with the Public Service Commission to discuss the possibility of reducing rates. International News Service learned today. Two formal complaints have already been filed against the company. Engineers and statisticians of the Commission are now at work studying the company's recent financial report and their findings will form a basis for a discussion. Discussions will center chiefly around a $100,000 item in the company's financial statement which the Utilities will be called upon to justify. Formal rate cases filed by the City of Bethlehem and the Public Ownership League, are now pending against the Pennsylvania Power & Light Company. It was believed these rate cases will be held in abeyance until the informal discussions get under way early in August.

15 Injured in R. R. Wreck

Upper Sandusky, O., July 17.—Fifteen persons were injured, three seriously, when the Pennsylvania Railroad's Liberty Limited, west-bound from Pittsburgh to Chicago, crashed into the trailer of a small truck at a downtown grade crossing here today. Those seriously injured were: Engineer R. D. Todd, 47, of Fort Wayne; Fireman J. W. Ritch, 48, Fort Wayne; and Richard Willard, 25, Cambridge, Ohio, driver of the truck. The 12 other injured persons were all passengers in the 10-coach train. None were seriously hurt and only a few required medical treatment. Demolishing the trailer, the giant locomotive finally keeled over on its side at right angles to what was left of the tracks. As it came to rest, the engine boiler exploded, shooting clouds of scalding steam in all directions.

REDS FINE PARENTS FOR CHILDREN'S BAD ACTIONS

New Plan is All Part of
"Restoration of The Home"

OFFENSES NUMEROUS

By Lindsey Parrott
(U. S. S. Staff Correspondent)
MOSCOW, July 17.—(INS)—North and South, to say nothing of East and West, Stalin's new order rehabilitating the home and decreeing that family life be respected and respectable, is upsetting the old Russian customs. True to Soviet practice, parents now are getting it in the neck—or at least in the pocket book—because their children don't live up to the new ideals of orderly conduct.

Instead of patting little Communists on the head when they toss rocks at passing automobiles or through windows, the militia now are fining the parents for failure to keep the family life under control.

And in the far-Southern regions of the Soviet Union, oriental to the core, arrests are being made and show-trials put on to get across the idea that it's now improper to recruit the family by kidnapping brides or deplete it by selling-off daughters.

Leningrad, where the workmen and peasants who occupy the palaces haven't yet learned the manners of the former owners apparently is the center of the campaign to make children well-behaved by fining their parents—and so establish disciplined family life.

Within a few weeks after Stalin's order, 385 parents had been hauled to court and penalized for failure to keep their sons and daughters orderly.

Here is the scale of offenses, as

BEAVER COLONY THOUGHT FIRMLY ESTABLISHED NOW

Have Dam Six Feet in Height
at Joseph Smith Farm, Falls Township

BOAT USED ON LAKE

Huge Oak Tree Undermined
By Water, and Topples
Across Stream

That Bucks County now has a beaver colony that is becoming firmly established is the general belief, with the period during which one family has been located near Fallsington approximating one and one-half years.

The colony of beavers obligingly erected a dam about six feet in height, thus backing up sufficient water to form a small pond on which young Alvan Smith, of Fallsington-Emilio Road, and his friends enjoy boating. The dam has been built at a point on a small brook, known years ago as "Comforts Creek," where the properties of Joseph Smith, Joseph Bux, and Harry Walker, John, and to say that portions of the land of these three are affected is putting it mildly. For where once there was a large area of dry meadow land, there is now a wide stream, and on the outer edges, marshlands.

The small stream, which a lad could jump with ease, has been widened just above the dam to approximately 25 feet, and from there it spreads out over a wide level area, in which frogs, minnows and the beavers have an enjoyable life.

In the Winter of 1933-34 a beaver dam and lodge were discovered in Queen Ann's Creek, which flows by the farm of Chapman and Baker, Oxford Valley Road, near Emilio. This was the first colony noticed in the county for 20 years. When ice was thick on the stream during the mid-winter season, visitors could secure splendid views of the dam and lodge, the latter several feet above the dam. But the beavers remained there but a few months, leaving soon for parts undetermined. Queen Ann's Creek and the little stream on the Smith property are not connected, state residents of the section. The stream where the beavers now have the high dam eventually empties into the Delaware River near the Tullytown Arsenal. Queen Ann's Creek flows in a different direction.

When the dam at the Smith property was first discovered, Mr. Smith thought some boys had erected it, and after freeing the waters he took the small pieces of wood and twigs to the house and used them for firewood.

But as he passed the same spot the following day he noticed another dam, somewhat higher than the first, and decided not to molest it, and await the outcome. Eventually it was learned that beavers were making their home, and soon the dam, although not nearly as wide as the one on the Chapman and Baker farm some time ago, became nevertheless higher, measuring about six feet. Within the past several days the beavers have started to erect another dam about 10 feet downstream.

The little lake thus formed excited the boys of the section, and Mr. Smith's son and his friends have a row-boat anchored at the site of the dam, and frequently enjoy rides. They are not so sure about the skating in the Winter, however, believing the growth of weeds would prevent a smooth surface. Weeds are also growing from the top of the dam.

L'ETAT, C'EST HUEY
America's first experiment along the line of a good, snappy, up-to-the-minute 1935 dictatorship is under way in Louisiana. It took the Louisiana legislature just 58 minutes to railroad to enactment the 26 bills making Huey P. Long, to all practical purposes, the state of Louisiana. That seems to set a new record for legislative servility, even in these days.

Those 26 laws do a lot of things. Here are a few: municipal government virtually is abolished; Long is given absolute control of the jobs of every non-elective public official; and of 12,000 school teachers; the kingfish also will command the state militia, control elections, supervise state, parish and local finances and have power to spend state funds as he chooses.

Many in the once-proud sovereign state of Louisiana will not like these laws; but even the proudest of surviving old-style Louisianans hardly will take the suicidal recourse of armed insurrection against Long and his army. Of course, there are the courts. But there seems little hope of relief in Louisiana courts where Huey's sword dangles over the head of the judiciary. Prospects of help from the federal judiciary are a little brighter, if some point of conflict can be established between Huey's laws and the United States constitution. The difficulty there is that the constitution, while definitely barring the way to a federal dictatorship, permits the states rather thoroughly to enjoy the fruits of their own folly in localized government.

Perhaps, however, the "nine old men" will offer Louisiana eventual escape from Huey's dictatorship. Despite frantic efforts by the executive branch of the federal government to head off Huey by threatening to deny him bread to accompany his circus, the judicial branch looks like the better bet. Even the impudent Huey cannot say to the supreme court of the United States (as he might say to Mr. Farley) "What is the constitution between friends?"

MORE AND MORE FARMS
Preliminary census figures give a new slant on agricultural conditions. Those who used to make speeches lamenting that farms are being deserted will have to find new causes for lamentation.

In eight Midwest states census enumerators found that the number of farms has increased 98,731 since 1930. And the distribution of these increases is uniform and not confined to the neighborhood of large centers of population. Of the 666 counties in which the count was made, farm increases occurred in 603.

Two causes were assigned: Many little farms have been developed near big cities, and there is a tendency toward intensive agriculture which enables families to get a living from fewer acres.

Another significant report from an entirely different source shows a healthy condition. More grange halls are being constructed in the United States than in any other period of the 70 years of history of this important farm organization. Only the more prosperous and confident granges build new halls.

Carol, of Rumania, must choose between his crown and the girl friend, making him the 978th star of "The Student Prince."

Predicts Casualty List of 27 Civilians Per Minute in War

Italy are about 30 minutes flight from Germany.

Or all the capitals, only Rome and Moscow are comparatively safe in the next war. They lie too far away from their potential enemies.

What are the available bombing planes now in the hands of the future belligerents, or now building?

Admittedly built or building are 1500 "first line" planes of all descriptions apiece for France, Germany, England, Italy, 2200 for the Soviet Union, 700 for Poland, and 500 for Czechoslovakia. Behind each "first line" plane must be a minimum of three "reserve" planes. Germany surrendered 18,000 military airplanes at the close of the war, though she had but 3,000 in active service.

Kept up reserves would give France, Germany, England and Italy 6,000 machines apiece, the Soviet Union 8,800, Poland 2,100, and Czechoslovakia 1,500 or a total of 23,300 machines.

Chastely, "not one of my own choosing—the house supplied him temporarily while I was gathering a staff. The boy, we have learned, was a student in a dental college and a casual worker. His folks live in Manila—there will be no obligation."

He stopped abruptly at a slight frown from Miss Sire. Her father had turned his attention to the young woman who had entered the apartment with him.

"Karen," he said, "this lady is a newspaper reporter. The house management, it seems, at the suggestion of the police, has excluded the press, and she appealed to me to take her up in the elevator with me. Met me at the curb when I got out of the car. Enterprising, wasn't it?"

Karen bowed to the reporter, measuring her with a swift but unoffending eye. What she saw was a woman past youth, yet without a mark of age, which might have been thirty; a well-groomed, modish figure, a strong but handsome face with an artificial smile. Her shimmering black hair was bobbed, skin old ivory, teeth even and white enough, yet with that indefinable suggestion of skilled treatment by a dentist.

"Thank you, so much, Mr. Sire," her tone, a little effusive, bore a trace of unfamiliar accent. "I hope Miss Sire will forgive the intrusion—reporters sometimes must use wiles."

Karen bowed again, a little coldly. "Oh, I'm not going to ask for an interview or your picture—just an impression, you know; it's quite unusual for one to have been so close to a remarkable tragedy. And in such a place." Her approving eyes beamed a little as they took in the room.

Meyers had opened the door in answer to a bell. "Captain Boyle is here, sir," he announced.

"Come in, Captain!" It was Maurice Sire who spoke; he extended his hand as Boyle entered, leading him away from the group.

THE SNOW LEOPARD

SYNOPSIS

Karen Sire, lovely daughter of the wealthy Maurice Sire, is suspected of murder when her new Filipino servant is stabbed in the back and thrown out of the window of Sires' exclusive Park Avenue apartment. Dick Bannister, young geologist, witnessed the man's plunge from the street. He is greatly attracted to Karen and cannot conceive of her committing the crime. A valuable clasp and girdle are missing from a rare leopard skin robe belonging to Sire. The robe had followed the Filipino in his descent and was badly torn by Dick's attack. "Baby," Karen's chow, "Napoleon," tried to take it from him. At the Sire apartment where the inquiry is being held, Captain Boyle leaves Detective "One-Armed" Toole in temporary charge and goes out. Dick finds a stiletto in the aquarium and slips it into his pocket, unnoticed by Toole. Karen is unmoved by the incident. Boyle returns and orders Karen searched. The latter slips her hand into Dick's pocket and relieves him of the dagger, dropping it into Toole's pocket instead. Finding nothing on the girl, Boyle again leaves. Toole then reveals that he knew all about the finding of the stiletto and Karen's planting it on him. He refrained from reporting it because he believes her innocent and, besides, he has an old score to settle with Boyle. "One-Armed" explains that, a year ago, he was on the trail of a pair of crooks, Big Jeff Whipple and his sweetheart, Brenda, vowing to lose an arm before he'd let them escape him. They did, and thereafter Boyle called him "One-Armed." Toole, also insinuating that the detective accepted a bribe from Whipple. The detective connects the so-called "Whipple Syndicate" with the present killing, claiming they were after the clasp and girdle. Toole drops the stiletto back into the aquarium. He believes Brenda will try to get it that afternoon. "She'll want to be around when your dad gets here," he adds mysteriously.

CHAPTER VII

The stiletto still reposed in the aquarium and Bannister made up his mind that so long as it remained there, with the possibility of Brenda Whipple's appearance, he had a right and a duty to stand by.

Karen's attempt to identify by her romantic project of bagging a snow leopard disappointed him; her interest in the Orient seemed to turn chiefly on the kind of women he had met there—the beautiful Eurasians, she mentioned specifically—and Bannister was not just then in a mood for confessions. So he spoke in large and general terms of the hapless position of mixed breeds in the Far East—the males surnamed by whites and yellows alike, the females a prey to both.

"Poor toys of Fate!" Bannister sighed at this, "Pat" has often spoken of them in the same way. They seem to have no place in an orderly world."

"Their social position," Bannister rejoined jealously, "is a good deal like that of mules among domestic animals. They have no pride of ancestry or hope of posterity."

Toole put in a word. "Born with three strikes on 'em," he said.

"No worse off than you, Toole," Bannister retorted. "You called three strikes on yourself by letting that 'One-Armed' stuff get you goat. It's cooked your goose as a detective."

"Only as a New York City detective," Toole answered grimly. "I'm going to get Jeff and Branda Whipple on my own."

"Expect an assignment from Miss Sire's father?"

"No—on my own, I said. How do I know where the trail will lead?"

"Perhaps you'll find that Pop planned this robbery and murder himself." Karen thrust in with artless good humor.

"Perhaps," Toole's lips merely framed the word—he did not utter it. Bannister and the girl watched him as he laid down his knife and patted his right arm. The rollicking spirit with which he had sat down to the feast was gone. He was in the grip of a fixation—the chase, capture and finish of the Whipples, that would make him "One-Armed" Toole no longer.

Bannister looked at Karen to see if Toole's implied suspicion of her father had been taken seriously. But she remained serene. "I must go downstairs to meet Pop," she said finally. "I should have gone to the flying field. Don't dare do anything that will keep me away when this mysterious person returns for the stiletto."

In a moment she was on her feet and speeding toward the door leading to the floor below.

Toole signalled the serving man to remove the luncheon things. Taking his derby from the aquarium ornament he put it on and gazed into the water.

"Huh!" Bannister sneered. "Can't the others with the impersonal air of a hotel guest and looking about him in the mild curiosity of one entering a strange suite.

"Like the place, Karen?" he asked with a caressing touch on her shoulder.

"Splendid, Daddy dear," she answered, "yet I'm afraid I'll want to be away from it a long time after what has happened."

He came grave. "Bad as that, eh? Well, I'll do whatever is possible for the boy's parents or dependents. He was a Filipino, they told me."

"So Meyers says." She glanced toward the butler.

"Yes, sir, a Filipino," put in Meyers.

Karen bowed to the reporter, measuring her with a swift but unoffending eye.

you think without that old bonnet on your dome?"

Toole took off the offending lid and laid it on the window sill. "Take the air, young fellow," he advised. "Nothing is going to happen for a while. Miss Sire will want to be alone with her dad and you'll be only a kibitzer. I'm going to stick here until my own captain calls me in. Come back, in about a half hour, if you like."

Bannister strode around the room. He hated to leave. Pausing at the aquarium, he gazed down at the stiletto for the tenth time, then moved toward the door leading to the stairway. He had reached the middle landing when a tableau arrested him. The servants were drawn up in the wide foyer below. The butler, motionless for a moment, suddenly stepped forward and swung the heavy door inward.

Bannister heard a delighted little cry. He caught a fleeting glimpse of a tall, slight man, bronzed as deeply as himself and quite as carefully dressed, yet of singular distinction; then Karen Sire was burrowing into the newcomer's arms.

Maurice Sire had arrived. But he was not alone—a woman of arresting beauty and presence had glided in at his side. Sinuous, vibrant and eager, she paused within the little circle of serving people, her brilliant eyes flashing for a moment as they fell upon Karen, only to drop demurely when the girl's father turned.

Bannister had heard from Hod that Sire's wife was dead. A picture of this partner-like woman as Karen's possible step-mother rose unbidden before him. Mere conjecture, of course. The fear was superseded by a thrill—could this woman be Brenda, the Whipple Syndicate? If so, why her friendly relations with Maurice Sire?

Whatever formality attached to Maurice Sire's homecoming was due entirely to the efforts of his Southhampton butler, who had drilled his new town staff for the occasion. Sire himself contributed nothing to it; he spoke familiarly to his chief functionary, ignoring chines out of which 9,400 would rank as "first line."

All the emphasis today is on the bombing machines. It is a fair estimate that the seven countries named will be able in the near future to put 5,000 bombers in the air and a great proportion of them are capable of carrying a ton or more of bombs. In other words a destructive load of 5,000 tons of high explosives and lethal chemicals could be flung at any moment upon the heads of the 20,000,000 inhabitants of the capitals of the future belligerents.

Marshal Petain records that "During the Great War in the course of 112 air raids carried out by 196 raiding airplanes and 441 raiding airplanes, the Germans discharged on British soil some 300 tons of bombs. These caused serious damage as well as killing or wounding 4,951 persons."

The present British foreign minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, told the House of Commons when he was air minister: "Whereas in the late war some 300 tons of bombs were dropped in this country by the Germans, air forces today could drop almost the same weight in the first twenty-four hours and continue this scale of attack indefinitely."

But that statement was made on the basis of a British air staff estimate in 1926, nine years ago. Since that time such progress has been made, and such enormous expansion of Europe's air forces has taken place that according to General Grover, "The scale of air attacks is now at a moderate estimate three or four thousand fold greater than it was in 1918, and the range from which it can be delivered has since then been more than doubled."

Thus if 300 tons of bombs caused 5,000 casualties, 5,000 tons could cause sixteen times more casualties or 80,000. It took four years to drop the 300 tons. Today the 5,000 could conceivably be dropped in twenty-four hours.

What would be the results?

Now, as a result of his act, the judge who imposed the sentence has been dismissed, the head of the local judiciary has been censured and the Moscow chief of police has been warned.

Pravda, which raised the case to the status of a public scandal, revealed that Sveranovski, riding in a street car, paid 10 kopecks fare but, when the conductor demanded five more, argued the point.

An inspector on the car, backed the conductor and, as minor officials are permitted to do in Russia, levied a three rouble fine on the spot.

When it turned out that Sveranovski had no more money in his pocket, he was halted to a police station, locked up for 10 days pending trial and refused communication with friends.

The two-year sentence followed and only when Pravda representatives stumbled upon the case and exposed it was the term rescinded.

A new outlet for the water has been provided above the dam, and eventually the water joins the original stream some distance away.

The result of the beavers' work is in evidence in other ways also, they have cut with their sharp teeth a number of small trees. The water which has backed up has also undermined a large oak tree, 2½ feet in diameter and about 50 feet high, and this soon toppled over, but continued to put forth leaves.

One lodge is to be seen, some distance above the dam.

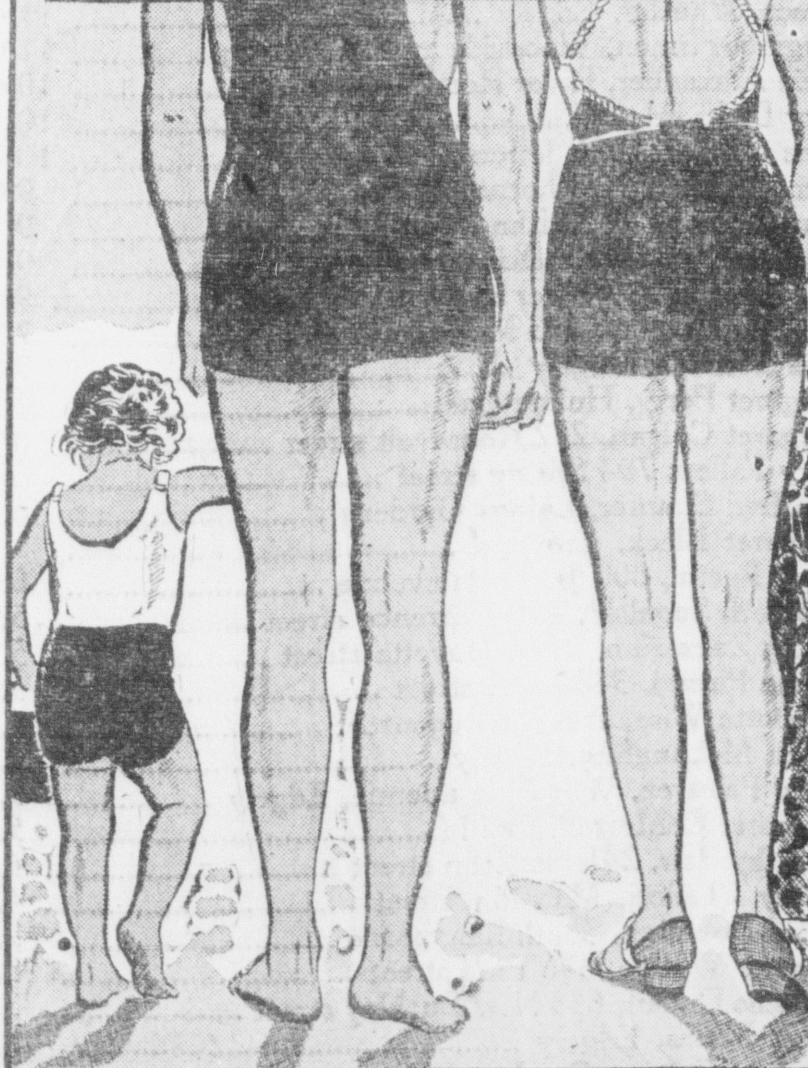

"We don't see musk-rats here any more," said young Allen today. "There used to be a lot of them, but now you can see only a few of their houses. Maybe the beavers chased them."

showed 15 warnings issued, five arrests, four pending, one completed and $50 in fines collected for the Borough.

Reporting on the street work being done this year, Councilman G. Thawley Hayman, chairman of the street committee, said that practically all the resurfacing work has been completed, but that a bit of permanent construction work is now under way.

It was reported that fifteen new street signs have been erected and that the remainder of the town will be properly marked with street signs as soon as the pipe and signs arrive. A. R. Haldeman, of Doylestown, was awarded the contract to supply 100 pieces of used pipe to be used in the erection of the street signs, for a total of $229. His bid on new pipe was $385. A bid from Leon Stultz & Son for new pipe was exactly the same, $385, but no bid was submitted for second-hand pipe. Thomas Gamon, Jr., of Sharon Hill, submitted a bid for guaranteed second-hand pipe, amounting to $229.41, less one per cent.

Council members authorized that Chief of Police James Welsh and Officer Scott Case be granted the privilege of attending the Delaware County Police School on "police science," conducted at Swarthmore College, during a Fall term of three months which includes twenty-five two-hour lectures. The tuition of $10 per officer, and the transportation will be paid by the Borough. The school is conducted by the outstanding police and crime authorities in the Eastern United States, including Federal, State Police, State Highway Patrol and city bureaus.

Council directed that the building committee headed by Councilman Joseph Windholz, purchase a new power mower from the Doylestown Agricultural Company for use at the water works grounds and other borough property.

A motion was also made that the police committee advertise for bids for garbage collection in Doylestown for one year starting September 1.

After the meeting, Council members were the guests of Borough Treasurer Horace M. Mann, at Horace High's restaurant.

IT IS A BARGAIN

Because electricity is a money saver as well as a labor saver, its home use is increasing, even when the family budget is under close scrutiny.

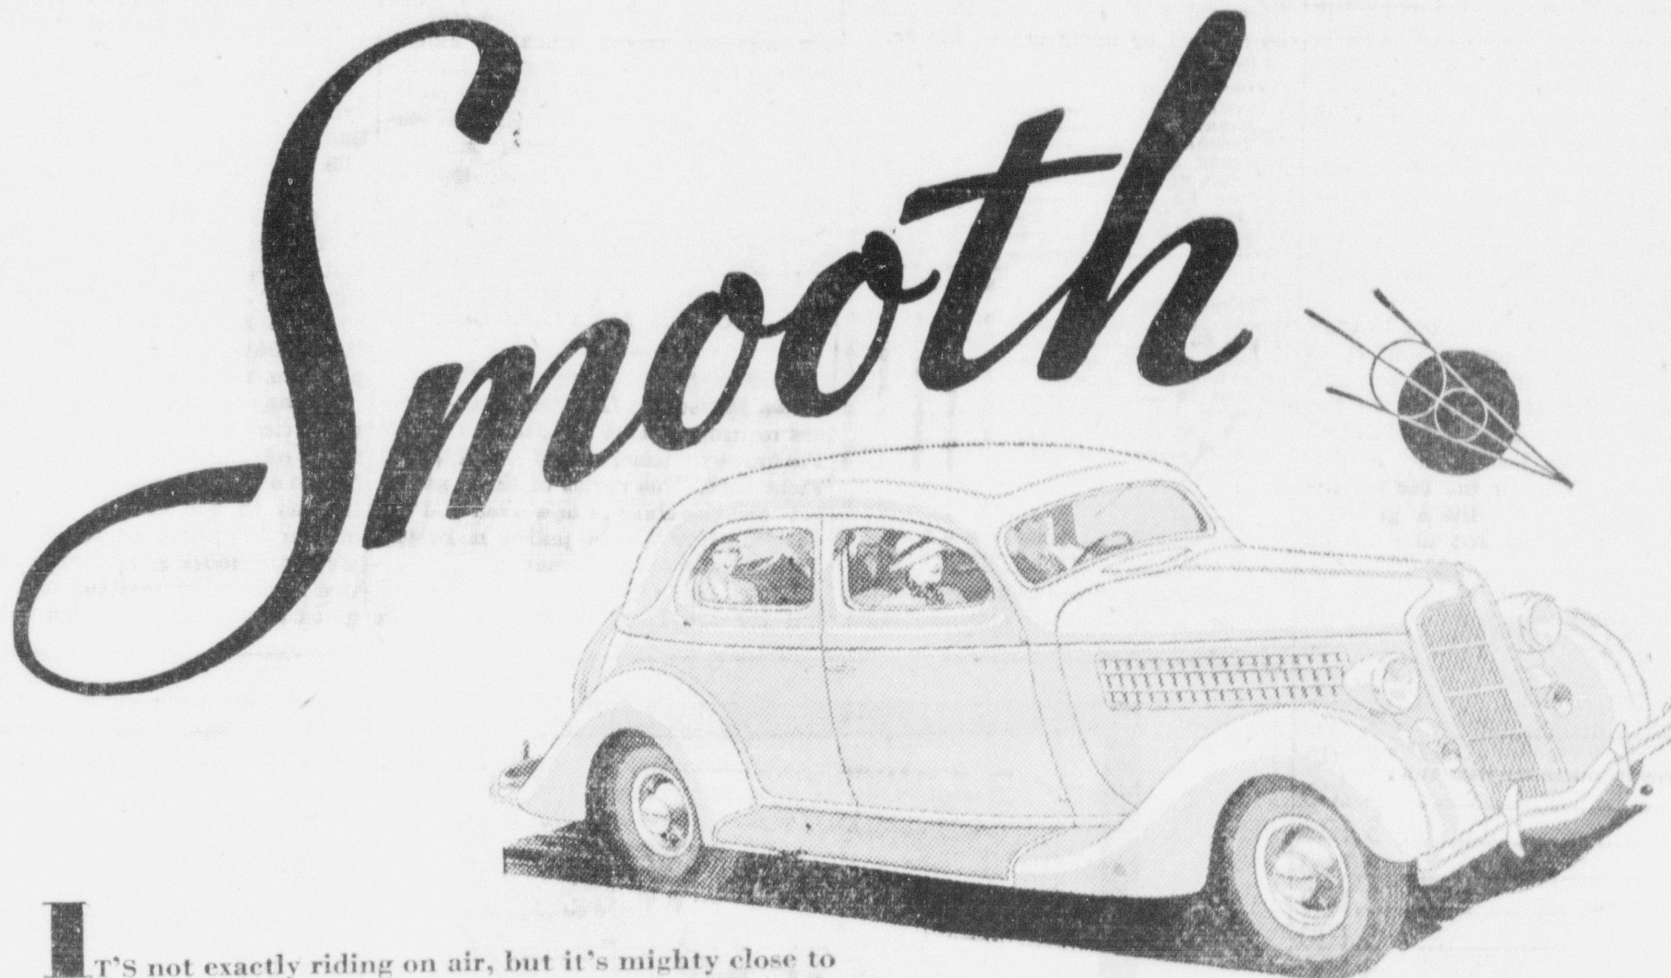

In 1934 there were 450,000 domestic customers added to the electric service lines in the United States, making a total (including farm customers) of 20,693,751 homes using electricity.

Furthermore, the use per customer increased about 5% in that year, and the average cost declined from 5.5 to 5.3 cents per kilowatt-hour.

Any service with such a record, when buying is done so carefully, must be a year 'round bargain.

PLAYERS' SIGNING DATE IS EXTENDED TO JULY 24

The signing of the players limit in the Delaware River Baseball League was extended until July 24 at a meeting of the circuit Monday night in the office of Neal Nolan, Morrisville. The extension was allowed because of the Morrisville team changing managers and will sign new players to the squad.

"Red" Justice, Dave Lukens, and Abe Harrop will handle the destinies of the Morrisville team with the backer being J. Allen Hooper. Dave Lukens will be in charge of the club while in action. It was also decided that the game between Hulmeville and Morrisville be played later in the season while the Morrisville-Washington Crossing game be forfeited to Washington Crossing. The protested game between Dolington and Morrisville is in the hands of the protest committee which consists of: Wilmer Black, Langhorne; Cy Young, Morrisville; and Manus Kline, Trenton.

After the meeting Monday, Manager Lukens announced that the following players of the present Morrisville team will most likely be kept: Rafferty, Swope, Kane, Broderick, Hartsough, Paxson, Seltzer, Lukens and Brokholtz.

Teams and representatives were: Edgely, Fred Hibbs; Dolington, Jack McGary; Morrisville, Dave Lukens; Lambertville, Harry Sheppard; Washington Crossing, Willard Leedom and Hulmeville, Leon Comly.

BLACK'S ARM AND BAT TOO MUCH FOR "HIBOES"

The arm and bat of "Howie" Black was too much for the Hibernians last night on Leedom's field as the Hulmeville A. A. nine avenged an early defeat by blanking the erstwhile league leaders, 1-0. It was the first defeat of the second half for the Hibs and as the Newportville team forfeited to Edgely, the first place position today was a deadlock between the Braves and Hibs.

Black was hooked up in a hurling match with Roy Devlin. Devlin was just as masterful as Black but made the mistake of grooving one to his opponent in the fourth. The lanky twirler of the first-half champs who is as equally good with the stick as he is on the hill promptly seized this opportunity to bang his bingle of the game. As Afterbach was on second as the result of an error by Lyzack and a pass, he scored on the single. This proved to be the only marker of the contest.

Both twirlers allowed four hits. "Pop" Black allowed two doubles and a duo of singles while the Hibernian twirler was solved for a double and three singles. Devlin whiffed five while the winning hurler breezed three Hibs. Devlin was a trifle wild while Black controlled his ball splendidly.

The only player who solved the "Old Man of the Lower Bucks" pitchers twice was Pete Heckman who socked a single in the first and in the sixth rammed a double to left. Neither time were the following batsmen able to push him around. The Hulmeville hits were scattered.

After Joe Roe grounded out to Carlen in the first, Heckman singled to center but Lyzack fled to Allison and Harrison's fly went to Bilger. In the Hulmeville first, Kelestyn handled throws from Roe, Devlin, and E. Roe to retire the side. In the second Afterbach fanned but Allison got two bags on an error by Joe Roe but on the following play, Harrison stopped Black's grounder for a fielder's choice at third base. Carlen slammed a double but Andy was the third out on his fly to right.

Three flies by Sullivan, E. Roe and Lyzack was the story of the Hibernians second. For Hulmeville, Leigh and Bilger were easy outs but Hemp hit safely to center. Watson died on his fly to center. Kelestyn opened the Hibs third with a long double to left, but Devlin grounded out, Roe fied out, and Black asserted pressure to fan Heckman.

Hulmeville counted the only run of the game in the fourth. Afterbach was passed. Allison fled out to Sullivan. Afterbach went to second on a bad throw by Lyzack. Black socked a right field hit to score Afterbach. Carlen struck out and Andy fled out. The Hibs half of the frame were fly balls hit by Lyzack, Harrison and Sullivan.

Neither team had a player reach base in the fifth but in Hulmeville's sixth, Afterbach singled but died stealing. Heckman doubled with two gone for the Bristollans but could not score. Leigh and Bilger reached base as the result of a pass and error in the Hulmeville seventh but two were out and Hemp struck out to retire the side. Sullivan singled in the Hibs' last but could not advance as Roe ended the contest by flying out to Bilger.

SECOND-HALF GAMES TO BE STARTED TONIGHT

At a meeting of the Bristol Twilight League held in the office of D. Landreth Seed Company last night it was definitely decided to open the second half of the circuit tonight with three games being scheduled. On Leedom's field, the Hibernians will play Jefferson A. C. At Tullytown, the Caseys will play the Tullytown club while at Newportville, St. Ann's will play Newport Road Men's Club.

The teams will each play fourteen games during the second half, scheduling games on Saturdays and Sundays on Leedom's field as well as the diamonds in Edgely, Tullytown, and Newportville. The deadline for the signing of players for the second half was set as Sunday night.

The following players were picked to represent the Twilight League in the "Dream Game" to be played on Leedom's field, August 7: Catchers, Angelo and Dougherty; pitchers, Knis, Bragg and Green; infielders, Bud Tullo, Carman, John Dick, Bill Thompson and Tosti; outfielders, Earl Spencer, McGinley, DiTanna, Ihrig and Walt Long.

Teams and their representatives at the meeting were: Cubans, James Spencer; Hibernians, Nevin McGinley; St. Ann's, Frank Sagolla; Newport Road, Edwin Bartie; Caseys, Edward McDevitt; Jefferson, Maurice McCurry; Tullytown, William Sweeney; and Edgely, Johnny Dick.

SEED-PACKERS DROP CLOSE SCORE TO FIELDSBORO

Poor support given to "Danny" Hines caused the Landreth Seed-Packers to drop a close 5-4 decision to the Fieldsboro nine, last night, at Fieldsboro. The series of three games between the clubs is now even and the deciding fray will be played in Bristol during the month of August.

Hines made his first start on the hill for the Landrethmen and would have had a victory if his support did not fail him. He issued but one pass and fanned five batters. The Seedmen outlit the winners, 11-8. "Fatty" Woodington pitched for the winners.

"Billy" Griffith of the Jerseyites crashed out a home run in the third while "Glee" Dougherty had a double and two singles for the Bristollans. Rockhill tripled to start a Landreth rally in the ninth but was called out for failing to touch second base.

FIGHT FOR 4TH PLACE WILL BE HELD TONIGHT

Tonight on the Edgely diamond, the fight for fourth place in the Lower Bucks County League will take place. The Bristol A. A. team, occupants of this position in the circuit, will play the Odd Fellows.

The A's have won two games and lost three, while the Odd Fellows have captured but one contest in four tries so a victory for the Oddies will give them undisputed possession of fourth place in the loop.

Manager Sutton, of the Oddies, will start either "Bill" Minster or "Johnny" Harmon on the hill with Bob Mason doing the receiving. Mulholland intends to use either "Spike" Tryon or Ralph Tromp on the hill. If Pat McCarthy looks good during the practice sessions, Mulholland may make a quick change and send him to the hill.

Game is scheduled to begin at six-thirty o'clock sharp.
